What is Accreditation?

The voluntary establishment of benchmark standards to acknowledge and encourage good landlords and tenants through the process of accreditation

Who Operates Accreditation Schemes?

Local Authorities, Universities and Colleges, Landlord Organisations and the Voluntary Sector

What Does Accreditation Achieve?

- Better housing conditions for tenants through higher standards
- Better tenants for landlords through recognition of professional standards
- Better neighbours for communities

What is the Accreditation Network UK (ANUK)?

This is a Government and Agency supported initiative committed to networking organisations involved in voluntary accreditation. It is operated as a non-for profit charitable activity by Unipol.

What Does the Network Do?

The Network promotes and publicises the benefits of accreditation and develops and shares good practice between local authorities, landlords and communities in the private rented sector.

What are the Benefits of Membership?

- Discounts on the annual conference, regional seminars and events bringing together best practice in the sector
- A twice yearly substantial newsletter giving news and views of those operating accreditation systems
- Special website access to developing documentation, the national model scheme and details of voluntary accreditation schemes by region
- E-mail bulletins
